

MAN AND WOMAN KILLED; 5 HURT IN WEEK-END CRASHES

Fatal Accident Occurs at The Grade Crossing Near

One Man Hurt When Struck
By Car As He Fixes
Flat Tire

A man and a woman were killed and five injured in week-end automobile accidents in Bucks county.

The man and a woman were killed and their two companions seriously injured when the car in which they were riding struck an express trolley of the Lehigh Valley Traction Company two miles north of Quakertown, at 10:30 yesterday morning.

The woman, Mrs. May Hesser, 77, of Phoenixville, was thrown by the impact of the collision between the car and trolley and was dragged 100 feet up the tracks. She died instantly, suffering fractures of the skull and of both arms and legs.

The driver, William C. Kastle, 68, of Linfield, Montgomery county, received a fractured skull and internal injuries and died in Quakertown Hospital shortly after 6 o'clock last evening without regaining consciousness. Isaac Smith, 79, of Spring City, suffered a fractured skull and lacerations of the face, and his wife, Mrs. Lydia Smith, 75, received a broken leg, broken arm and fractured skull. Both are in the Quakertown Hospital.

At the crossing, there is a warning sign with an electric bell, and also an unobstructed view for some distance on both sides of the crossing, according to police.

The front of the car became entangled with the right front steps of the trolley and was dragged 100 feet up the track before the trolley stopped. The automobile was reduced to wreckage.

State Highwayman John Shubert, of the Doylestown sub-station, said he would place it under arrest on a charge of involuntary manslaughter, pending an investigation by the coroner, Dr. H. Clayton Meyer.

Earl Weisel, 19, Quakertown R. D., and Mary Wright, 21, Quakertown R. D., were riding along the Trumbauersville-Finland Road, at 12:30 yesterday morning, with Weisel at the wheel. Weisel, it is said, fell asleep and the car struck a pole on a curve in the road. The body of the car was wrecked and Weisel is in the Quakertown Hospital with a possible fracture of the skull.

The accident was investigated by Patrolman Rentz, Doylestown sub-station.

The cars of Robert Kruse, 30, Theodore avenue, Philadelphia, driving west on the Lincoln Highway at Lincoln Point, and Margaret L. Delwig, 19, Fox Chase, going east, collided. Miss Delwig is in the Mercer Hospital, Trenton, N. J., with lacerations of the left ear, and knee.

Patrolman Lefkowitz investigated. Kenneth Hetherington, 21, Allentown, is in the Quakertown Hospital, with possible fracture of the skull and a dislocated knee.

Hetherington was fixing a flat tire on his car on the Bethlehem Pike, five miles north of Quakertown, last night. He was stooping over with his back to traffic when a car driven by William W. Hipple, 52, Frankford, struck him knocking him for a considerable distance.

Patrolman Rentz, Doylestown sub-station, investigated.

Jack Benny Heads Cast In Film "College Holiday"

They're here again—the four comedians who made such great entertainment of "The Big Broadcast of 1937"—Jack Benny, George Burns and Gracie Allen, and Martha Raye—in another melange of beauty, charm, comedy and harmony. It's titled "College Holiday," and it shows Monday and Tuesday at the Grand Theatre.

"College Holiday" is an original screen comedy written by J. P. McEvoy. In it Benny is the press agent of a bankrupt hotel who flees in a bedsheet after the sheriff strips him of his clothing. Thus allied he is met by Miss Boland and Girardot, slightly bawdy cultists, who are on their way to take over the hotel to try out their theories. They are dressed in ancient Roman garb.

Thinking Benny a member of the cult, they send him east to bring back a swarm of college boys and girls. Gracie Allen, also a member of the cult, is to pair the youngsters off.

MORRISVILLE PRAISED FOR ATTRACTIVE SCHOOL

State Official Recently Visited Buildings and Noted The Improvements

CLASSES TOO CROWDED

MORRISVILLE, Feb. 15—The added attractiveness of the high school site was stressed in a report of Walter E. Hess, adviser on secondary education in the State Department of Public Instruction, just made public here. The school grounds have been recently graded and sidewalks laid. The Hess report was read at the meeting of the school board.

Hess stated he was pleased with the library improvements, complimented the policy of annually adding to the reference materials for both teachers and pupils and expressed satisfaction with the program of studies. He spoke particularly well of the teaching situation.

"Visits to a number of class rooms indicate," he said, "that teachers are interested in the development of a functional instructional program. Direction and assistance are given to the teachers in their work. With the physical materials which have been provided some fine results are being secured. Some teachers are developing individual ability, are obtaining satisfactory group response, and are stimulating in the pupils a desire for further knowledge."

The only adverse criticism Hess makes of the high school is relative to the size of the classes. He urges a reduction in the number of large classes as a means of increasing the effectiveness of the school organization. "It is extremely difficult for teachers to conduct classes in such a manner that a maximum of pupil participation will be secured when classes have enrollments greatly exceeding 30," he said.

The secondary school classification report shows that Morrisville has 96 classes which have more than 35 pupils, the maximum recommended by the State Department.

The board voted to set the rate for substitute teachers at $4 per day if working less than 10 days. If more than ten days the pay will be $5 per day for elementary teachers and $6 per day for high school teachers with a 20-day month.

A financial statement of sports was given to the directors in which it was shown that there has been a large deficit. To eliminate some of this, it was suggested that baseball and hockey be dropped. A suggestion was made that if the school board can furnish transportation for the teams some of the deficit would be eliminated and the whole program continued. It was reported, however, that baseball will be continued for the present and the full schedule of games will be played during the coming season. The transportation problem will be considered later.

William B. Anderson, Walter R. Taylor and Supervising principal M. R. Reiter gave their reports of the annual State convention of school directors at Harrisburg.

BUCKS COUNTY REPRESENTATIVE IS OPPOSED TO PERSONAL PROPERTY TAX LAW; AGAINST COLLECTION SCHEME

Wilson L. Yeakel, Perkasee, Calls Law Unfair and Says That Kelley's Scheme is One to Provide Jobs for Democrats;
Legislator Says He Finds Much Opposition To It

PERKASIE, Feb. 15—Voicing strong opposition to the continuance of the State and the county taxes on personal property and stating that he has found "strong sentiment" in the legislature to support repeal of the law, Wilson L. Yeakel, member of the State Legislature from Bucks County, has set forth his views clearly upon the bill.

Representative Yeakel also says there are many who oppose the plan of John B. Kelley, Secretary of Revenue, to have the State collect both the county and State taxes. Yeakel thinks he Kelley plan is merely one to provide jobs for the Democrats.

"Centralization has never been economical in the State government," says Representative Yeakel. "I have no doubt that centralization of tax collection would merely add to the general expense without adequate return to the Treasury, simultaneously providing more jobs for hungry politicians at Harrisburg at a time when the State payroll already is the highest in history and the budget is sadly unbalanced."

Yeakel described the personal property tax as "inequitable" because it puts a penalty on thrift and levies at the same rate upon securities in default as upon those paying a maximum return in interest or dividends.

"When the State added one mill, and finally four mills, to the county's four mills of personal property tax," the Bucks legislator said, "were told by members of the Earle administration that in this way we would uncover untold millions of untaxed wealth and that the returns would reduce the taxes on real estate and provide huge sums for unemployment relief."

"As a matter of fact, there is little or no untaxed wealth in Pennsylvania. In one way or another every pocket-book is being heavily taxed and every accumulation of money, from the larger holdings of the rich to the smallest savings of the poor, is made to contribute directly or indirectly to the ravenous maws of tax-hungry Government spending agencies."

"Nor has this tax yielded the immense sums estimated by its sponsors. Receipts to date are more than $5,000,000 below what the optimistic framers of the law confidently asserted they would be. And as for the lower real estate taxes as a result of this act—that is to laugh. I do not know of one county in Pennsylvania that has been able to reduce its millage by reason of the property tax. But I do know that a lot of home-owners, who have put their small savings into bonds and mortgages have been doubly soaked as a result of this unjust and inequitable statute.

"The law is full of faults, the worst of which is that the tax is collected whether or not the security against which it is levied is earning dividends or interest. Members of the Legislature who are hearing complaints from back home tell me that thousands of mortgage owners—men and women of small means who put their savings into what they regarded as gilt-edge investments in days before the depression—not only have been in many cases receiving no income from the money they have thus tied up but, although they are unable to sell their holdings, they are required to pay this iniquitous tax on the face value of their unmarketable securities."

RESIGNS AS COUNTY ECONOMICS WORKER

Rhandena A. Armstrong To Enter Philadelphia Public School System

IN COUNTY SIX YEARS

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 15—The resignation of Miss Rhandena A. Armstrong as home economics representative in Bucks County becomes effective today. Miss Armstrong has held the position in Bucks County for six years, having started January 1931. She was the third woman to carry on home economics in Bucks County and organized 17 different sections in the upper end of the county, 22 in the lower and 31 in the central sections.

Miss Armstrong, who graduated from the University of Maine at Orono, Maine, and received her master of arts degree from Teachers' College, Columbia University, New York City, has been elected supervisor in the Division of Home Economics in the Philadelphia Public School system. She will be located in the home economics department in the Board of Administration Building at Twenty-first street and the Parkway in Philadelphia.

She is particularly qualified for her work as supervisor because of her teaching experience in high school and also her extension service with the University of New Hampshire and University of Nevada.

Miss Armstrong, before taking up her work in Bucks county, served as home economics extension representative for three years at Concord, New Hampshire and about two years in Nevada. She was also connected with the American Home-makers, Inc., Boston, as director of home information.

At a meeting of the executive board of the Bucks County Agricultural Extension Association, Miss Armstrong was presented with an attractive, practical and substantial travelling bag in recognition for her services among hundreds of girls and women in Bucks County engaged in home economics projects. Mrs. Evan Stover, of Richboro, made the gift presentation.

Report of Year's Work Is Heard by C. D. of A.

The business meeting held in the Knights of Columbus home, Thursday evening, by Catholic Daughters of America, Court Bristol, No. 1097, proved to be a most interesting one.

A report was presented and read by the grand regent, Mrs. Andrew Moore, in regard to activities, and including charity and expenditure.

The local court during the year 1936 and the months of January and February, 1937, dispensed the sum of $390.70 for charity and personal donations to various causes. This entire amount, with the exception of about $50, was used in this borough for needy and worthy cases.

The expenditures included installation of a dumb waiter in the K. of C. home, a large double porcelain sink in the kitchen, equipment for cooking, also dishes, glasses, silverware, table linens, towels, tables and chairs.

At the conclusion of the report the grand regent thanked the members and urged them to continue in their efforts, and support the various affairs that are being sponsored by the C. D. of A.

Mrs. Moore announced there is a program being arranged for the Daughters on the night of February 25th, and requested all to attend.

ARREST TWO YOUTHS AT NEWTOWN WHO CONFESS TO COMMITTING SEVEN ROBBERIES; SOME OF THE LOOT HAS BEEN RECOVERED

NEWTOWN, Feb. 15—Seven robberies have been solved and a number of others will be solved, it is believed, by the arrest of two colored men here on Saturday. The arrests were made by Bucks County Detective Anthony Russo and Constable Charles P. Aita, of Bristol. The two men arrested, John Smith, 18, and Linsey Harris, 17, both of this borough, have admitted their guilt in the seven robberies, the officers state, and it is believed that the same two are guilty of others, but have not as yet admitted them. Both men have been held without bail for court. They were given hearings before Justice of Peace Tranter, this borough. State police have questioned the pair with the hope that other crimes may be solved.

The two youths, according to the officers, have admitted robbing the dairy of John C. Goodnoe, Newtown Township, which they entered on three different occasions and stole in all about 50 quarts of milk and cream.

Three chickens were stolen from the chicken house of Samuel Richardson, Newtown Township, and five chickens were taken from the henry of John White, Newtown Borough. Two chickens were found by the officers in a bucket at the home of the men. The chickens were dead and picked ready to be stewed when the officers made the arrests Saturday afternoon.

Another of the places entered was the garage of Marvin Keller, where the pair visited on four different occasions and stole about 30 gallons of gasoline. The private garage of George Otto, Wrightstown Township, was also broken into and two oil stoves and three antique lamps were taken. The lamps and the stove have been recovered.

The pair after being closely questioned by Detective Russo admitted their guilt and signed confessions.

JUDGE KELLER GIVES BADGES TO MOTHERS OF EAGLE SCOUTS, WHO IN TURN BESTOW HONOR UPON THE LADS, AS COURT OF HONOR IS HELD

Court Room at Doylestown Jammed for the Event on Sunday Afternoon; Two Scouts Attain Life Scout Badges;
Awards Are Numerous at the Colorful Affair

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 15—Every seat in the court house was filled, more than 200 Scouts were seated on the floor, and several hundred were disappointed by not having seats at the annual Court of Honor of the Bucks County Scouting Council, yesterday. The ceremonies were conducted in the large Court Room No. 1, Sunday afternoon. The event concluded the local council schedule of activities for National Boy Scout Week commemorating the 27th year of Scouting in the United States. Over half of the audience comprised parents and adult spectators.

The opening remarks were given by Past President Thomas Ross for Court of Honor Chairman Hon. Hiram H. Keller, who was prevented from being present at the opening through an unexpected engagement requiring his presence elsewhere in the early afternoon. Mr. Ross said, "It is a great satisfaction for us to see what Scouting has done in Bucks County Council through these years. We started in 1927 with 13 troops, and 231 boys. Today, we have 64 units, and nearly 1300 boys. We look to a future of at least 1500, a real swimming pool for Buccoo, and finer training for our leaders. It is our pleasure so many of you have arranged to be with us this afternoon."

President Judge Hiram H. Keller was able to arrive in time to present the Eagle Scout Badges. Judge Keller gave the badge to the mother of each of the new Eagle Scouts, and the mother pinned the emblem on her son. Participants were: Mrs. Dey P. Chapman with her son, Seascout John Chapman, Ship Wasp, Andalusia; Mrs. Robert N. Dippy, Sr., and Scout Robert N. Dippy, Jr., Rushland; Mrs. Ernest Gamble, Sr., and Scout Ernest Gamble, Jr., Langhorne; Mrs. Gladys Hagar, and Seascout William T. Hagar, Langhorne; and Mrs. Robert Sigafos, and Scout John Sigafos, Doylestown.

"From time immemorial palms have indicated success," said Judge Calvin S. Boyer, while presenting Eagle Scout Palms to Eagle Scouts Stuart Badman, Kenneth Gerhart, and Ralph Nicholas of Quakertown Troop No. 2.

Two Scouts attained Life Scout, the rank next to Eagle. The awards were given by Past President Ross.

The presenting of the Star Scout badges by educational chairman Dr. A. J. Strathie, Newtown, reminded him "of the stars above." He said, "In the daytime they cannot be seen but we know they are there. We like to think of Star Scouts as doing their Good Turns whether they are seen or not. The stars each have a charted course. Follow your Scout Oath and Law as your chartered course. It will build traits in you that will make you dependable and successful." Many Scouts were given their merit badges by North Penn District Chairman A. R. Hendricks, Sellersville.

"Men are Wanted!" to lead our youth in Scouting was the plea of Edmund H. Lovett, Yardley, district chairman of Delaware Valley. The first class badges were awarded by him. District Chairman Walter W. Pitzonka, Lower Bucks, Bristol, gave the second class.

The greatest pleasure Council Scout Commissioner William Burgess, Jr., Morrisville, has during the year is to present the veteran awards to men with five, ten and 15 years of service. Dr. A. J. Strathie was the 15 year veteran for this Court.

The invocation was given by Rev. L. H. Willhite, chairman of Bristol Troop No. 3. Commodore Thomas B. Stockham, chairman of senior scouting committee, and one of the past presidents gave the benediction. District Commissioners Lewis H. Fetherolf, Milford; A. Y. Michie, Jr., New Britain; Raymond D. Gilbert, Churchville; and Paul R. Sine, Perkasee, were of great help to Scout executive William F. Livermore in making the presentations. Assembly and taps were blown by assistant Scoutmaster William M. Carlin, Jr., Doylestown No. 1.

A Lincoln Memorial service was conducted as a part of the pledge of allegiance led by Dr. J. J. Willaman, Bristol, national council representative. The Lincoln University quartet was secured by treasurer J. Purdy Weiss to sing two spirituals. The allegiance included the presence of President Abraham Lincoln (Raymond Rutherford), and a color guard from Doylestown Troop No. 2 directed by Dillwyn Darlington.

Chalfont Troop dramatized the Scout law investiture. Scoutmaster Ronald Wilson with his Scouts portrayed the accepting of a tenderfoot applicant into their troop. The candle ceremony was planned so that the candle bearers came from all parts of the audience. The laws were given by a selected group of 12 Scouts with the candidate guided to the investiture setting by Assistant Scoutmaster Arthur Drach. Group Chairman Harry Riebel was splendid in his advising the applicant on his responsibilities as a member of the Scout Troop. The dramatization was complete with National Council Representative Asher H.

Bliehn conducting the annual National Recommitment Ceremony by having everyone renew his Scout Oath.

The most thrilling and impressive event of every Court of Honor is the King Arthur—Eagle Scout Ceremony. Members of Quakertown Troop No. 2, under leadership of senior assistant Scoutmaster Gerald Rosenberger, effectively carried out their parts. Field Commissioner of Training O. Kenneth Fretz was King Arthur. The setting made it possible for Mr. Fretz to appear before a round table, and speak to his Knights. Father Time, by Cubmaster Clifford Reese, opened the scene to guide the audience into the atmosphere of the occasion.

Sakima William M. Carlin, Jr., Mawachpoo Howard Boehret, and Opmpees David Neill gathered their members of the Order of the Arrow into a large group for the Pre-Court Indian Ceremonial. The tepee was painted by the Order members of Chalfont Troop, and the campfire was secured by the Order members of Doylestown Troops No. 1 and No. 2, under the direction of Scoutmaster Hillborn Darlington, Jr. The clever lighting effects of the campfire were installed by group chairman Robert N. Dippy, Sr. Eagle Scout Carl Leidy was The Chief; David Whiteback, The Firebuilder, and Howard Boehret, The Tom-tom Beater.

Every Scouting activity requires a tremendous amount of preparation. Scenes must be constructed, and painted. Leaders, and Scouts willingly volunteer their time. Credit for the main scenes should go to those leaders who worked many "midnight hours" with Scout Executive William F. Livermore during the past week. The work was done in the basement of the Court House and the Keller Building. The helpers were led by Rover Crew Leader Gilbert W. Carlin, Chalfont. Rovers giving their assistance were Howard Boehret, George Carlin, William M. Carlin, Jr., Joseph Clark and Ronald Wilson. A trip to Buccoo for special scenic effects was taken by George Carlin and Joseph Clark. Scouts of Doylestown No. 1 and No. 2 worked with Dillwyn Darlington in painting the setting. Eagle Scout Carl Leidy assisted in the carpentry.

Field Commissioner George E. Dorfner is well known for his lighting arrangements during the Scouting activities. The Court of Honor requires a five spot flood tower, and auxiliary lights. All of them were installed, and operated by Mr. Dorfner. A three spot light combination was controlled by Field Commissioner Walter V. Rutherford.

NOW IS THE TIME TO SPEAK

Twenty years ago probably there was as much sentiment in the United States against war as there is now. The nation rejoiced in the re-election of a President who "kept us out of war." A month after the inauguration of that President's second term, we were at war.

Twenty years ago now anybody could speak freely against war. After April 6 of that year anyone speaking against war was a public enemy and a traitor.

We have an immense capacity for accommodation of sentiment in this country and ingenuity for finding sanctimonious reasons for supporting our conduct. When we got into war we were going to make it a crusade to share our democratic ideals with all the world. Pulpits thundered it. Religious periodicals elaborated it.

One of the leading church papers said that when war was declared on Good Friday, "Ten thousand ministers modified their Easter sermons."

The lesson to learn from the experience is that those who oppose war must do their talking while there is time for it.

"SEEING" OVER THE PHONE

After many years—just how many cannot be definitely fixed by any amateur—long-distance telephone conversation vis-a-vis grows definitely nearer. The whole achievement of television is too technical in essence to be dealt with by any one not trained in science, but its possibilities appeal to all of us.

Carried to its farthest reaches, perfected television possesses connotations to the thoughtful. One can, to take an easy path, visualize a gentleman calling up his wife—about 6.30 o'clock in the evening—to inform her, with very careful enunciation, that he has been detained by important business at the office, will have to be late and to not wait dinner for him. The wife, if she is like 98.6 per cent of experienced wives, respects the worst, but with television she will have some degree of certainty. The thought is painful, but at least the wires will not transmit a cocktail aroma.

The domain of "talking a girl out" will be seriously invaded. The lady, much en dishabille, responds to a call and, from habit, says: "I feel like a rag." Peering into the television diguns, the swain agrees: "I see you do." Which is not at all according to the old rules. Or she says: "I am going to stay in tonight and go to bed early." To which the turned-down one might respond, genially, "That is a swell new dress you've got on; makes you look like a million dollars," knowing full well that a show, with somebody else paying for the tickets, is in near prospect.

Nobody is willing to decry science and all its achievements. Television will bring new problems to life. But the fair sex is adaptable to changed conditions. It can always think up something else.

Now that the country again has a good nickel cigar it wishes it could pay fifteen.

There is still one more white-collar job for WPA. Nobody has made a survey of surveyors.

Yet the only thing that keeps any man from being a tyrant is the fact that he can't get away with it.

ECHOES OF THE PAST

By Courier Staff Member

Review of the news as it appeared in the Bucks County Gazette issue dated at Bristol, Aug. 12, 1875. The Gazette, a weekly newspaper published in Bristol, was discontinued following its merger with the Courier.

Last Saturday morning, about one o'clock, a fire was discovered at H. A. Scheetz's wheel-wright shop at the foot of Wood street, near the canal basin, and soon spread to Kinsey Evans' tin store on the corner of Wood and Mill. The fire department was promptly on hand, and soon had the flames under control. The store of J. H. Wood, on the opposite corner, took fire on the roof at one time, but it was promptly extinguished. The loss to Mr. Scheetz amounts to between four and five hundred dollars, upon which there was no insurance. Mr. Evans estimates his loss at about $800, which was uninsured.

The ferryboat "Edwood Doron" broke down last Monday afternoon, and was brought to anchor off the bar near Burlington, and raised the flag of distress. The steamboat John A. Warner took the Doron in tow to Burlington, and during the night she was taken to Philadelphia for repairs. The accident happened right in the midst of the busy season of the year for the ferry company, and occasions much inconvenience to those who have business between this place and Burlington county.

Thirty-one years ago Rev. A. R. Horne, who at that time resided in Springfield, Bucks County, found a land tortoise and cut his initials and the date on its shell. He found the tortoise again in 1864, and again engraved the year upon its shell. While on a visit recently to his old home he again came across the same old tortoise, alive and kicking.

The locomotive of the New York and Washington train broke down at Bristol last Tuesday. Another locomotive was dispatched from Trenton, and the train departed only fifteen minutes behind time.

A bald eagle was shot at Pineville, by Thomas Claxton, last week, which measured six feet and a half from tip to tip of the wings.

About 50 Bucks County teachers are present at the State Teachers Association at Wilkes-Barre.

The house of Thomas Douglass on Franklin street was struck by lightning last Saturday evening. A demolished chimney-top was the extent of the damage.

NEWPORTVILLE—A large force of men are still employed by the Railroad Company, repairing the bridge at Schenck's station. The ticket office and telegraph office have been removed to the right of the track which is a great accommodation to the public.

A field of potatoes, belonging to Mr. George Read, has been almost entirely free from the potato bug all summer, but was visited by them one day last week and in less than 24 hours every potato vine was eaten out, and by a careful estimate, there was no less than 100 bushels of bugs to the acre. Hugh Douglass' potato patch was invaded in the same manner. But Mr. Douglass says he mounted the fence, cursed them half an hour, threatened to haul all of the straw out of the barn and burn them up, and a threat also that St. Patrick might be enlisted in the warfare, they all quietly disappeared; and now Mr. Douglass pronounces them the most obedient and intelligent insect he has seen since he came to America.

DOYLESTOWN—The following teachers have been selected by the board of school directors: William H. Walker, principal; Anna P. Cozon, of Warrington, assistant; Charles P. Myers, Lizzie Barber, Julia VanHorn, and Emma Mathews.

WARMINSTER—Lieut. J. M. Horsham was nominated for register of wills at the Republican convention of Montgomery county on the 2nd instant. The lieutenant was a prominent soldier and officer during the late war, in which he did good service, as a member of the 132d Pennsylvania Volunteers.

On last Friday evening an Irishman, evidently a tramp, was killed by the cars, a short distance below the turnpike school house. He stepped from one track to the other to avoid an approaching train and was killed by one going in an opposite direction. He had a letter in his pocket purporting to be a claim for $35,000 due from the United States to General James Cullen for services in front of Richmond. He was probably insane.

A son of Eli Doan, of Spring Valley met with a serious accident one day last week. The boy was playing in the mill, which was in his father's charge, when a rope which he had tied around his body was caught in the shaft. Before he could be released one of his legs was terribly mangled. His recovery is doubtful.

"LUXURY" MODEL "by MAY CHRISTIE

CHAPTER XXXV

"I pack and leave tonight. I wouldn't stay here another minute," Luana assured them.

Yvonne flounced out of the apartment to permit this resolution to be put into effect. Armand followed her, to appease her and lie to her, as often he had lied before. Yvonne shrieked over her shoulder at Luana: "Before you go, you will give me thirty dollars for your half of these month's rent, since you gave notice now, without warning! If you do not give it to me, I call the police! I have you arrested!"

She stood out on the landing, making such a noise that other tenants of the building appeared. Finally, the landlord came up. The month's rent, to be paid in advance, had been due yesterday. Having been let down before by departing tenants, the landlord backed Yvonne in her demand. To the latter's annoyance, he pocketed Luana's money. To Yvonne's annoyance because, though Luana did not know it, Luana had paid the entire unfurnished rental of the apartment, which was $30, not $60.

The scene over, and everyone gone, Luana packed her few belongings in haste. She took Chou-Chou with her. She drove to the cheap hotel where she had passed her first days in New York. She now had but ten dollars in her pocket.

Next morning at the shop, she was summoned to the private office of Mr. Quackenbush at half past ten. He did not ask her to sit down. He glared through his glasses at her, and to her amazement she saw that he had before him on his desk some of her first rough drafts of original designs for gowns.

"Look at these," he boomed, "and be thankful from the bottom of your heart that I don't have you arrested!"

Had he gone mad?
"Why—why—haven't I a right to draw in my spare time, Mr. Quackenbush? Why, I did these one day in my lunch hour—"

"When no one saw you—or you thought that no one saw you." He tapped the papers. "You don't dare deny that these are copies of my originals?"

"I do deny it," Luana flushed to her ears. To his mind, that flush was proof positive of her guilt.

For several weeks, there had been a "leakage" from the shop, his very best models having been "repeated" outside.

"Why does Mrs. Vandaveer no longer come here to buy dresses?" His voice was one booming accusation. "Why do you go to her home, and see her? What takes you there? Answer me that."

"I—I'm a friend of theirs—they were kind to me in my illness."

"Kind because it paid her to be kind, maybe. But we will leave that alone. We will make no accusations there. She was a wonderful customer, and now I know she is no longer a wonderful customer. I can draw my own conclusions, but I say nothing. I see those copies of my originals, drawn by you—admittedly drawn by you—and know there is a leakage from the House of Quackenbush. The gowns are being repeated up and down Broadway. His voice rose. He banged the desk in front of him.

"Please call Mrs. Vandaveer in my presence, and she will refute what you have accused me of," said Luana, trembling.

"It is not my custom to accuse customers, nor is it my custom to take orders from employees," he replied slowly, with deadly effect. "Apart from the rights or wrongs of the style stealing, I have further proof of your unavailability to remain here, Miss Waters." He held up a newspaper clipping. "You entered this house on false pretenses."

Luana took the half sheet of paper that was headed: "Hollywood Citizen News." A picture of Gerald and herself stared at her above the appalling caption: "Notorious Crook Gets Ten Year Stretch at San Quentin for Swindling."

"You cannot deny that you are married to him—that you unlawfully entered yourself as a contestant in the Models' Competition that was open only to single girls?"

She stammered: "My stepfather has had it annulled since then—"

"That doesn't alter the fact that you deceived us, that you are not a reliable person, Miss Waters. Why, even your name is an assumed one. And your connection with this criminal is not a recommendation."

She could not deny it. She could only stand there, white-faced and stunned.

"I no longer wish you to remain in my establishment. The cashier will give you two weeks' wages." He rose, dismissing her.

Yvonne had done a thorough job. . . .

"But of course you will stay with us! I absolutely insist that you stay with us!" said Lorraine Vandaveer in her charming, well-bred voice.

She had met Luana on Fifth Avenue a week after her dismissal from the House of Quackenbush, and had been struck by her look of exhaustion. They were standing outside a teashop and Lorraine drew her inside.

"Now, not another word until you've had a hot cup of tea and a nice fat English muffin!" Lorraine had her kind moments. This was one of them.

They sat at a corner table overlooking the Avenue. It was nearly five. She had been going to a cocktail party, but now it behooved her to play the Good Samaritan.

In any case, she had wanted to see Luana about her costume for the Charity Pageant in Madison Square Garden. It had been made for her at a theatrical costumers', and there was something wrong with it. Luana was extremely clever with suggestions.

"So that fiend fired you, did he? I'll give him a piece of my mind! To think the money I've spent in his wretched shop, and the appalling prices he charges, and now he dares to fire the girl I recommended him!"

"Please don't say anything to him, for it wouldn't do a bit of good," Luana begged. To have Mrs. Vandaveer know of her unfortunate marriage and its annulment was something she couldn't endure to think about.

"But why, Luana? Why? What reason did he give?"

"Yvonne, the French girl in the sports department, made a lot of trouble. I roomed with her, and she got jealous about Armand, her sweetheart."

"That greasy-faced cat! I never could endure either of them. But"—inquisitively—"Quacky wouldn't make you leave because Armand was making passes at you. He knows his little Armand. Maybe he was making passes at you himself? Was that it?"

"Oh, no," Luana gave a faint smile. It would not be easy to tell Mrs. Vandaveer that she herself had been suspected of complicity in accepting sketches of the advance styles from the costumers'—that Mr. Quackenbush had jumped to that conclusion because Lorraine came so seldom to the shop of late.

"You know," said Luana slowly, weighing her words, "her it's my ambition to become a dress-designer. A model's career is a blind alley, anyhow—"

"Unless it leads to a good marriage," Mrs. Vandaveer interrupted her.

She watched the girl sharply, wondering how much involved she was with the Randolph young man. "I was making sketches out of my head, in my spare time at the shop as well as at home, and Mr. Quackenbush got hold of them, and was so unjust and angry that he simply wouldn't listen when I assured him they were entirely of my own invention."

"Probably he thought you were selling them to the costumers? The old sinner!"

Luana sipped her tea and stared moodily out of the window at the passing throng upon the Avenue.

For a moment Lorraine wondered if "Quacky" had been right in his conjectures?

Were she a poor and struggling girl, who knows but what she wouldn't grab at anything that came to hand to make money?

If everything was fair in love (as Lorraine believed) the axiom applied to other matters. . . .

The only crime was in being found out. But a second look at Luana convinced her that the girl was speaking the truth about the sketches.

"Look here, I'll phone Quacky now. I'll put this thing straight." "Please don't," Luana put a hand on her arm as she half rose from the table. "He'd know I'd told you about it."

"Why should he know? Couldn't I hear from any of the other costumers that you were no longer with him? Good heavens, Luana, you were his best model! Everyone said so. He can't get away with this injustice."

"He'd know I told you, because at the time I asked him to telephone you." This with reluctance.

"You wanted me to tell him he was wrong about your sketches being copies of his dresses? But I'd never even seen any of the sketches, Luana! Great heavens! Did he think"—light dawned on her—"did he presume to think I was bribing you to tip me off to the advance models, so I wouldn't have to pay his prices? Was that it?"

"Something of the sort. Only he backed down on it when I challenged him."

"I insist on knowing what was said."

Luana looked worried. She had burned her boats now. Mrs. Vandaveer would find out everything. She was a born prober.

"He said you'd been a wonderful customer, and were no longer a wonderful customer, and that he could draw his own conclusions."

Mrs. Vandaveer rose up in wrath.

"Leave it to me to give him a piece of my mind and make his ears burn. I'll threaten him with a lawyer's letter. I'll fry him in his own grease. . . . boil him in all his oil!"

She went straight to the telephone booth and called up the shop. Five minutes later she returned to a distressed Luana, beaming with the knowledge of a job well done.

"He literally crawled, Luana! You never heard such a stream of apologies and explanations. But I turned a deaf ear to them. I gave him an earful. He groveled, Luana. Simply groveled!"

She lit a cigarette and ordered two glasses of wine.

"That'll buck us up, my dear. By the way, I'll flicking of the ash with an airy gesture—if you want to go back to Quackenbush's, I can have you reinstated? He as good as said so."

"Oh no, I couldn't possibly go back. It would be made so terribly uncomfortable for me. I should be suspected. Some of the mud would stick."

This applied to the whole high-class dressmaking trade in New York, as she had painfully discovered during her week's search for work. Well-known as she was, the costumers were afraid to employ Luana. In a game of "dog-eat-dog" she had been labeled a style pirate, a bootlegger of dress design!

They figured that Mr. Quackenbush would never have dismissed his best model had she not been definitely proved untrustworthy.

A dangerous employee, in fact. "What salary did Quacky pay you?" Mrs. Vandaveer asked.

"We were engaged at sixty a week—the winners in the Fashion Show, you remember—but the first week we were cut to fifty, and a couple of weeks later Mr. Quackenbush told us that, because of the depression, we'd have to get along on thirty-five till better times."

"The old Shylock! His prize boat is that he never felt the depression, and I believe him!" Mrs. Vandaveer paid the check, gathered her gloves, her sable scarf and her gold mesh bag, and rose.

"You come right home with me, Luana. We'll figure out something for you. Don't worry." (Luana would be very useful, in more ways than one.) "I'll send Odette, my maid, round to your hotel to pack your things and settle your bill for you. Joel and I have a duty to you since your illness. No arguments now." She drew her to the sidewalk and hailed a taxicab. They got inside.

The cab swung round on Fifth Avenue and shot up to 48th Street, turning to the right across Madison Avenue into Park.

Mr. Vandaveer was home. He welcomed Luana cordially. He had a fatherly interest in the girl.

During dinner, Lorraine had a bright idea.

"Look here, Luana, why don't you make some original sketches for gowns to be worn at the Charity Carnival in Madison Square Garden? They've swung round from their first plan of an Italian Pageant to a parade that's to be entitled: 'The American Woman of 1937.' The theatrical costumers and others seem void of ideas that far hence in costuming. Half the women I know have gone haywire about their dresses. Why don't you step in?"

Luana's tired eyes brightened.

"I'd see that some of your sketches would be printed in the newspapers, and that you'd get plenty of good publicity," continued the self-styled benefactress, desirous of not only making a good impression on Luana, but on Joel as well. A scheme was brewing that would need lots of diplomatic action.

"No matter what Quacky may say, the women who originally voted for you would stand by you. You've a grand following. Why lose it? Why not grab at this chance of getting even with Quacky?"

Luana flushed.

"I've no thoughts of getting even."

"But you've got ambition?"

"Certainly I have. I'd love to design gowns for the Pageant, if you think anyone would use them."

Bucks County Representative Opposed To Property Tax Law

penalty on thrift. Thus in the guise of "soaking the rich" it is snatching pennies from the purses of the poor and, not content with that, Government snappers are busy in every corner of the State, taking their own taxpayers' money for the doubtful duty of trying to prove that everybody is a criminal. Scarcely less objectionable is the State Revenue Department's demand for information concerning the private affairs of citizens in no way concerned with the operations of the law. It is snooping of the meanest sort to require the taxpayer to include in this report the exact amount of income received from the security held, since the tax is levied whether or not there is income.

"There is a strong and growing sentiment in the Legislature against this tax, largely due to vigorously expressed opposition back home. I believe that a majority of the members, whether they dare say so or not, agree in holding that instead of exerting itself to squeeze the last penny out of this tax the State Revenue Department and the Governor should be looking around for some more equitable and less onerous form of taxation to take its place; or better still, to cut the swollen State pay-rolls that the tax, as an emergency measure, could be eliminated altogether."

hood and adjoined a garage of recent construction.

The flames, which were small at first but spread rapidly, due to the high wind blowing at the time, suddenly enveloped the entire structure and illuminated the neighborhood. Burning embers were blown over the area.

Firemen were quick to respond and, realizing the seriousness of the blaze in the section, connected numerous hose lines and gave strenuous battle right at the start. The flames were soon gotten under control and spread of the fire to adjoining garages was prevented.

The flames apparently originated in the center portion near the automobile.

Truth Stranger Than Fiction Proved by Review of Almanac

Numerous Odd Facts Due to Whimsy of Nature

By CHARLES GREENHAM
International Illustrated News Writer
NEW YORK—That truth is stranger than fiction is most evident when one thumbs through the world almanac and discovers some of the odd facts which the volume contains.

Science and superstition are the bases of many of the strange facts pertaining to the earth and its inhabitants. Nature is also god-mother to many of the freakish things which defy the average power of comprehension. Here are some of the oddities which might well qualify for a "P. T. Barnum Book of Knowledge". . . .

Poland has 30 streets, squares and parks named after Woodrow Wilson, and five named in honor of Herbert Hoover.

When a Chinese meets a friend, he shakes his own hand. He cries only when happy, and gives presents at funeral times.

Tail Lights for Animals
The woodpecker does not eat the acorns it stores away; it eats the worms within the acorns, scientists say.

It is against the local laws of Portland, Me., to tickle a girl beneath her chin with a feather duster.

At Berea, O., no animal may go about the streets after sundown without a tail light.

At Zion City, Ill., it's illegal to tease your neighbor by making funny faces at him.

Glass can be spun so fine that one pound of it is elongated to the extent of 25,000 miles.

The inhabitants of Pitcairn island in the south Pacific are awaiting the second coming of Christ.

"Turkish delight," a confection sold widely in American candy stores, is made of American starch, imported by the Arab candy makers.

Gold leaf has recently been beaten so thin that it would take 282,000 layers of it to equal the thickness of an inch.

500 gallons of milk a year, the average production of the average dairy cow.

Mexican Indians suffering from tuberculosis tie a goat to their bed, believing the smell will drive away the germs.

Aesop's Fables "Ghosted"
Chinese used fingerprints as signatures on contracts more than 1,400 years ago.

Despite John Dillinger's many surgical operations to obliterate fingerprints, after he was shot, scientists discovered 113 points of identification on his hands.

Aesop's fables were not written by a man named Aesop. Socrates is credited by most scholars with their authorship.

There are 8,500,000 owners of dogs in the United States whose canine investments represents a cash outlay of $500,000,000.

Trained bears were taken from town to town in Hungary to be used in the treatment of lumbago. It was believed that the illness could be cured by having a bear walk on the patient's back.

When a rattlesnake is swimming, he keeps his rattles out of the water.

Last summer's extreme heat ruined notes of many musical instruments throughout the mid-west. Many a player blew high "c" and was surprised to be greeted with an unearthly noise.

I buy these Chesterfields

... because they give me the good things
I want in a cigarette

I work hard and I play hard... and I guess I smoke more cigarettes than most anybody I know.

The reason is... Chesterfields give me a lot of pleasure.

It's easy to figure why... they're mild, not strong... and they've got a taste and aroma that clicks every time!
